Roy Ayers, a master vibraphonist and leader in the 1970s movement which added electric instruments, rock and R&B rhythms, and a more soulful feel to jazz, died March 4 at 84. With commercial success Ayers released nearly 4 dozen albums, and the single, Everybody Loves the Sunshine, from his 1976 album of the same name, has been sampled nearly 200 times by artists including Tupac Shakur, Dr. Dre, Mary J. Blige and Snoop Dogg.
